My career journey has been shaped by various opportunities in these dynamic sectors, equipping me with a comprehensive understanding of client relations, operational excellence, and strategic growth. My time pursuing a Master's in Travel & Tourism Management at Amity Institute of Travel & Tourism (AITT), Noida, from 2017 to 2019, was a transformative experience. Amity's curriculum, combined with its experienced faculty, offered invaluable insights into various facets of the industry, from destination management and hospitality operations to marketing strategies and sustainable tourism. The interactive learning environment, including engaging lectures, case studies, and practical projects, fostered a dynamic atmosphere that encouraged critical thinking and problem-solving. I truly value my time spent there.

Vimarsh Sharma
Programme: M.Sc. in Wildlife Science
Class of 2017
Institute: Amity Institute of Forestry and Wildlife

Describe the Career and Current Role:

Working as Forestry & Biodiversity Advisor, Deutsche Gesellschaft für, Internationale Zusammenarbeit (GIZ) GmbH

Describe your journey at Amity University:

Pursuing my studies at Amity University was a defining phase in shaping my professional journey. The program's interdisciplinary structure, which blended core wildlife sciences with compulsory courses in business communication, behavioural sciences, and foreign languages, gave me a unique edge in navigating the real-world demands. Despite being part of a relatively small department with limited resources, I was always encouraged to think independently, design my own research, and even secure international individual funding—something that significantly contributed to my growth as a researcher and practitioner. Today, working as a Forestry and Biodiversity Advisor at GIZ India, I continue to draw from the foundation built during my time at Amity. The supportive faculty, exposure to current Indian and global challenges, and emphasis on innovation laid the groundwork for the meaningful work I am privileged to be a part of.
